SYMPTOMS OF A DISEASED LIVER.

Pain in the right side, under the edge of the ribs ncreases on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the eft side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulderblade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a Great Crowds Listening to Moody and considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A sugnt, dry cough THOUSANDS OF PERSONS TURNED AWAY is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet be can scarcely summon up them existed, yet examination of the body after death has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

"The management of the Agricultural Society is to be congratulated for the consideration they have manifested for our soldiers and the race they represent. Now let Richmond, Lynchburg, Petersburg, Norfolk, Portsmouth, and Farmville prepare to be represented in their native soldiery, and together present before the people of Virginia such a scene of 'pomp and circumstance' in the congregated negro militia as will surprise and please all who witness it."

We cannot too highly commend the sentiments contained in these extracts, or the felicitous manner of their expression; and there is but one word to which we can object. It is insignificance, as applied to the amount of the prizes offered. We would not remark on this even, except that it may be inferred that the Society has been niggardly towards the negroes. One word or so of explanation will be sufficient. When all the sleepers were required on the other the Executive Committee were considering these prizes it was stated by Chief-Marshal Frank Halstead, who lives on the Broad- Major Brown, on authority of one of the officers of the battalion, that the colored solter, was arrested in Richmond yesterday by diers preferred that the amount of the prizes Sergeant Jeter, charged with stealing a should be lower than those offered to the rest.
